KEYNOTE SPEAKER

KEYNOTE SPEAKER

Luis Benitez

Director of Outdoor Recreation Industry, State of Colorado
Over the course of a decade, Luis Benitez has quietly emerged amongst a growing field of inspirational adventurers as one of the more experienced, respected and busiest professional guides and leadership development consultants in the world. Throughout his career, Luis has summited the top of the famed "Seven Summits" a cumulative 32 times, including being a six-time summiteer of Mt. Everest. Benitez also has attempted the famed K2 in 2010. Benitez first summit of Everest was to climb with the blind athlete Erik Weihenmayer on his historic 2001 Everest summit, chronicled in the feature film "Farther Than the Eye Can See" and also in Erik's book "Touch the Top of the World". He also has led disabled veterans to the top of Mt. Lobu, out of which was born the Soldiers to the Summits non-profit organization. He has been featured in films such as "Visions of Everest" (2002) and "Shadow of the Condor" (2002), has reported from Mt. Everest for ABC-TV News, and has filmed segments for an episode of National Geographic's weekly TV series "Wild Chronicles". In 2006 while guiding a group in Tibet, his witness of a tragic and historic attack by Chinese soldiers on Tibetan refugees led to Benitez's firm commitment to dedicate his time to educating and helping people Be Their Own Leader. He is featured in a BBC documentary about that tragic event, "Murder in the Snow." Currently he serves at the first Director for the Office of Outdoor Recreation Industry for the entire state of Colorado.
